A tall, grey, cylindrical chimney stack rises from the industrial complex. To its left, a green-painted structure, possibly a water tower or part of a cooling system, is visible. The sky is filled with heavy, grey clouds, and a misty atmosphere hangs over the background hills.

A long row of white, rectangular containers or trailers with yellow frames. Each container has a window with metal grating. A green metal fence runs along the front of these containers. In the background, several grey pipes protrude from the roof of the brick building.

Small signs or notices are posted on the brick building. One sign features a logo and some illegible text. Another sign below it contains several lines of text, possibly contact information or safety instructions.

Two white vans are parked in a gravel lot. One van is partially obscured by a green fence. The lot is bordered by a low concrete wall and a metal fence.

The foreground consists of a gravel area with several puddles of water, suggesting recent rain. A green metal fence runs across the middle ground, separating the gravel area from the industrial site.
